TEXAS AND HER FLAGS

Since the first flag—a rainbow blazing in the sky over a water soaked world—man has used a flag or banner as a nation's symbol of God's gift of freedom.

Historically speaking, Texas is nearly 450 years old. But the Land of the Tejas dates back many thousand years. Thus it was known when the first European flag was brought to this part of the Western Hemisphere.

This was the Spanish flag of Charles II planted on this soil by Cabeza de Vaca in 1529. He established many missions. San Antonio is perhaps the best known.

Lasalle of France established Ft. Saint Louis on Lavaca Bay in 1685. Thus the fleurs-de-lis proclaimed the area as a French possession for a short time.

Mexico defeated Spain in 1821 thereby ending Spanish rule. When the Mexican flag was adopted in 1825, it flew over the land known as Texas until 1836 when Sam Houston led his men in the decisive battle of San Jacinto.

The Republic of Texas used a flag designed by Sarah Bradley Dodson until 1839. The Lone Star flag of today was designed by Dr. Charles B. Stewart, the second signer of Texas Declaration of Independence.

The Lone Star was lowered for the last time in February, 1846. As the new symbol of Texas' statehood, the Stars and Stripes, fluttered in the breeze, President Anson Jones sadly spoke, "The final act in this drama is now performed. The Republic of Texas is no more."

All was well until Texas seceded from the Union in 1861. The Stars and Stripes was replaced with the flag of the Confederate States of America until 1865.

Today the Lone Star, as our state flag, proudly flies beneath Old Glory, symbol of unity of 50 states and freedom of mankind.
